Re: New York Times: Free Drug Samples? Bad Idea, Some Say

Source: http://sci.tech−archive.net/Archive/sci.med/2007−05/msg00035.html

- From: Jason@xxxxxxxxxx (Jason)
- Date: Wed, 02 May 2007 18:08:15 −0700

In article
<kurtullman−57B1ED.18234902052007@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>,
Kurt Ullman <kurtullman@xxxxxxxxx> wrote:

> In article
> <Jason−0205071620540001@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>,
> Jason@xxxxxxxxxx (Jason) wrote:
>
>> Someone in another newsgroup mentioned a small drug company that was >> developing a drug that would CURE some types of kidney diseases. A huge >> drug company was already selling a medicaiton that was designed to TREAT >> at least one of those kidney diseases. That huge drug company purchased >> the rights to that medication that could cure some types of kidney >> diseases. Lots of people that had kidney diseases were HOPING that new >> drug would eventually cure their kidneys diseases. GUESS WHAT? That >> huge >> drug company did continue to develop that medication. The reason is >> related to MONEY. They knew that they could make much more money by >> developing that medicaiton that could cure some types of kidney disease.
>> NEVER
>> They could make much more money from their medications that could >> TREAT
>> those kidney diseases. Follow the money. Don't ask me for proof since I >> failed to write down the name of that drug
>
> Just out of personal curiosity, you got any names of medications > and names of companies to go with that?

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

No−−I saw the post in at least one of these newsgroups:
alt.support.kidney−failure
alt.support.kidney−diesease
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

.