

Re: 2 Rottweilers raided my chicken coop

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.agriculture.poultry/2004-12/0602.html>

From: maxh (maxh_at_thegrid.net)

Date: 12/31/04

Date: Fri, 31 Dec 2004 04:04:10 GMT

"ex WGS Hamm" <alpha.bitchREMOVETHIS@virgin.net> wrote in message news:Wh_Ad.558$z11.166@newsfe6-win.ntli.net...

>

> "maxh" <maxh@thegrid.net> wrote in message

> news:Uc_Ad.12838$RH4.6541@newsread1.news.pas.earthlink.net...

>> My locked chicken coop was broken into by 2 Rottweiler dogs, that seem to >> roam lose in my neighborhood.

>> I saw them running from the coop.

>> When I checked, I found out, that >> they killed 9 chickens, and 2 turkeys.

>> All I have left now, is the rooster.

>> If I encounter the Rottweilers again, trying to get into the coop, what >> would you folks suggest I do to them?

>> Shoot them or what?

>>

>>

> Call animal control. Find the owner and make him pay for the birds killed > and tell him you will shoot his dogs if they come onto your property again.

> Take all the legal steps you can against the owner before taking drastic > action. After all it isn't the fault of the dogs but the arsehole of an > owner.

No use calling animal control, since I live in a very rural area, where there is no animal control.

Trying to find out who owns the dogs is impossible, since everyone around here lives on 5 acres or more.

The dogs just disappeared into the desert landscape.

Therefore there are no legal steps I can take to recoup my loss.