

Re: Hello, and group of roosters

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.agriculture.poultry/2005-06/msg00098.html>

- From: " Jill." <news@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sun, 19 Jun 2005 18:50:31 +0100
-

Ecnerwal wrote:

>
> So I'm considering raising a group of cockrels, or depending on input > here, might have to hold that to one. I'm thinking if there is a group > of them from the same hatch which are raised together with no girls, > they might get along OK, but I don't really know, as it's outside of > my experience in the past.

for the length of time they will be around if you are talking about for the pot you will be fine. Give them things to do –AOL cds, hanging veggies some litter etc to scratch around in and there should be few disagreements before you cull at around 18 weeks.

Much later than that and you start getting into a different quality of meat – toucher, gamier, stringier etc

Good luck

—

regards
Jill Bowis

Pure bred utility chickens and ducks
Housing; Equipment, Books, Videos, Gifts
Herbaceous; Herb and Alpine nursery
Working Holidays in Scotland
<http://www.kintaline.co.uk>

.

- Prev by Date: Re: messy butts
- Next by Date: Introducing new chickens
- Previous by thread: Tea Tree Oil for bumblefoot?
- Next by thread: Introducing new chickens
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread