

Re: Rabies in the US

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.agriculture.poultry/2005-12/msg00335.html>

- From: "PammyT" <fenlandfowl@xxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 28 Dec 2005 14:08:46 -0000
-

"OmManiPadmeOmelet" <Omelet@xxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:Omelet-9A6A50.20561827122005@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

> In article <peksf.540$yX1.1534@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>,

> "PammyT" <fenlandfowl@xxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

>

>> Just heard my best friend's sad news that she has just lost her old

>> Rottweiler bitch who had been ill for a week. She had spent nearly £1000 on

>> tests to no avail. The vets didn't know what the problem was. The bitch ate

>> 2 sausages for breakfast and a couple of hours later my friend had come >> indoors from mucking out, to have a cup of coffee when the bitch gave 2 >> gasps and died, right there on the settee.

>> The whole family is devastated. :0(

>

> Nitrate allergy?

>

I have no idea. She had been fit and well until about a week ago. My friend didn't feed her dogs on smoked anything. They got a basic complete dog food.
It was probably age, plus her early history wasn't know as my friend owns rescue kennels and the bitch came in a few years ago as a rescue.

>

> A few hours later, he started having seizures and was dead less than 24 > hours later. The vet could not find anything wrong with him. He was a > Corgi/Sheltie cross...

>

My friends Rottie had been ill for around a week before she died and had had all the usual tests and xrays. Her symptoms were lack of red blood cells (anaemia) but tests for pyometra, leukaemia and the anaemia thing which is common and hereditary in Rotties, all came up negative.

> This little pure bred Corgi we just adopted for my sister reminds me a > lot of him. She is 8 months old. I posted a pic of her earlier this week.

>

> Dogs are such PEOPLE!

>

> Condolences to your friend..... Rotty's are cool.

Re: Rabies in the US

I like them too and always said that when my elderly giant schnauzer dies I would get a rottie as I need a large guard dog here for when I go out, however I don't think I'll bother as dogs, as nice as they are, are a ruddy pain in the backside. I much prefer the company of my cats. They are simply not as 'in your face' or demanding as dogs are.

-
- Follow-Ups:
 - ◆ Re: Rabies in the US
 - ◇ From: OmManiPadmeOmelet

- References:
 - ◆ Rabies in the US
 - ◇ From: nuele mersch
 - ◆ Re: Rabies in the US
 - ◇ From: sbffalo
 - ◆ Re: Rabies in the US
 - ◇ From: PammyT
 - ◆ Re: Rabies in the US
 - ◇ From: OmManiPadmeOmelet
 - ◆ Re: Rabies in the US
 - ◇ From: roseyposey
 - ◆ Re: Rabies in the US
 - ◇ From: OmManiPadmeOmelet
 - ◆ Re: Rabies in the US
 - ◇ From: Nicholas
 - ◆ Re: Rabies in the US
 - ◇ From: OmManiPadmeOmelet
 - ◆ Re: Rabies in the US
 - ◇ From: PammyT
 - ◆ Re: Rabies in the US
 - ◇ From: OmManiPadmeOmelet

- Prev by Date: Re: electric fences for chooks?
- Next by Date: Re: Rabies in the US
- Previous by thread: Re: Rabies in the US
- Next by thread: Re: Rabies in the US
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread