

Re: electric fences for chooks?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.agriculture.poultry/2005-12/msg00363.html>

- From: "David Hare-Scott" <compost@xxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sat, 31 Dec 2005 07:31:51 GMT
-

>
>
> Doesn't sound to me as if it was something that's easy to move around, > though? Probably a good solution for a really large run, or several that > are used in a rotation system.
>

No it's not portable.

> Your "normal chook-proof fence of about 1m (3ft) high" is something my > chooks would laugh about. They got out of their new run with a 2m high > fence around it, before I put the netting on top. But then, of course, > they aren't normal ;-)
>

Perhaps my friends have docile non-flying birds or maybe they are chook whisperers and can tell them to stay inside? For whatever reason it works for them. I would expect the method to work as well or better on a higher fence. I am not familiar with the commercial electrified net mentioned by the OP, how high is that?

David

-
- Follow-Ups:
 - ◆ Re: electric fences for chooks?
◇ From: Jill
 - References:
 - ◆ electric fences for chooks?
◇ From: paxwax3
 - ◆ Re: electric fences for chooks?
◇ From: David Hare-Scott
 - ◆ Re: electric fences for chooks?

Re: electric fences for chooks?

◇ From: nuele mersch

- Prev by Date: Re: Wind Egg
- Next by Date: Re: electric fences for chooks?
- Previous by thread: Re: electric fences for chooks?
- Next by thread: Re: electric fences for chooks?
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread