

Re: Over run with eggs

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.agriculture.poultry/2006-09/msg00197.html>

- From: enigma <enigma@xxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 27 Sep 2006 11:45:26 +0000 (UTC)
-

"janerene" <jane@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in news:efcl9j01kcg@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx:

How about selling them to church friends or at a local school? I have gotten so I can't keep up with my orders selling to both those groups of folks. People are funny, though. I have had some odd questions, like "Will they have chickens in them?" or "If I wait too long to eat them, will the chickens develop?" and "I'd rather eat the store's "sterilized" eggs." sigh.....

my 6 year old sells his eggs at school. they're not "organic" because the organic feed costs 5x more than regular layer pellets, but they are free range. however we only have 19 hens, & 7 of those aren't laying yet, 2 are Silkies & lay PeeWee eggs & we have no idea where Kate, the 4 year old white Leghorn, is hiding her eggs... :)

one of our eggs customers said she found a chick in one of her eggs, but then said it wasn't one of ours, she got it somewhere else. heh.

right now the roosters are all in a separate coop & pen, so the eggs are infertile anyway... and it's so much easier to get the hens to go into the coop at night.

with shorter days we'll get fewer eggs & probably not be able to keep up with orders again unless we put a light & timer in the henhouse..

lee

Question with boldness even the existence of god; because if there be one, he must more approve the homage of reason than that of blindfolded

fear. – Thomas Jefferson

.