Tell me about it! The cat and dog show standards are even more horrendous.
When I flip out completely with an AK47 & start mowing down breeders you'll know why!

Cats and dogs aren't in the RBST remit.

No – I was just sounding off about one of my pet hates re "animal lovers" so-called :-(

Breeding animals that no longer function properly – e.g. faces so distorted that they can't breathe freely or the neglect of functionality that Jill outlined – to me these are ugly–human practices showing disrespect of fellow critters. But then I don't hold to the belief that humans are really THAT much higher than other animals! And the people who buy deliberately–misshapen animals facilitate the breeders' trade. Ugly buggers the lot of 'em, except the animals who didn't get any choice in the matter.

(Anyone got a spare AK47 going cheap?)

They are VERY cheap from new.

Not in New Zealand – or perhaps I just mix with the wrong crowd!
