

Re: some thing diffrant

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.agriculture.poultry/2008-01/msg00077.html>

- From: "Jill" <news@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sat, 26 Jan 2008 08:38:53 -0000
-

a_l_p wrote:

Aha. You may be onto something with regard to the most recent. It was terribly hot, and there she sat in the corner of the chook house where no passing breeze could have reached her. I was quite concerned about her at times, esp as she hardly ever got off to go for a drink let alone food.

They can simply cook them in those circumstances ;)
I hear of similar tales over here some summers when fokls down south have these really hot spells.
In re-telling about their broody they are so proud that she sits SO tight, and you realise that she has not been a good monitor of the ambient temperature.
A really good broody in those situations is one who worries you that she is not on the eggs 'enough' <G>
It can also be a very good thing to giev her a sod of grass, turned upside down put beneath the nest. This was an old ploy to give the nest some humidity

--

regards
Jill Bowis

Pure bred utility chickens and ducks
Housing; Equipment, Books, Videos, Gifts
Herbaceous; Herb and Alpine nursery
Working Holidays in Scotland
<http://www.kintaline.co.uk>