"In fact, he walked and ran with better mechanics than we do today. The mechanics of his femur, femur head, pelvis, and lower back are superior to those of today. We have had to sacrifice some of that efficiency of walking and running to give birth to children with larger brains."

Now the Turkana Boy would not have needed 50 miles to run the horse down.

and the dry apers believe humans were wavanna

But all humans can hold their breath for 5 minutes and dive to 10 meters without any training, right?

sigh...

Yes.
