

Re: Exploitation d'un grand cé tacé au Paléolithique ancien (Re: "carnivore tooth marks")

Re: Exploitation d'un grand cé tacé au Paléolithique ancien (Re: "carnivore tooth marks")

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.anthropology.paleo/2008-03/msg00527.html>

- From: Marc Verhaegen <m_verhaegen@xxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 13 Mar 2008 20:23:47 +0100
-

None of this means that their principal use was for hunting large prey -- nor even that it was a significant function at all. It's like suggesting that all the 'personal weapons' carried around by most of the adult males in Afghanistan or in eastern Los Angeles are intended mainly for hunting wild animals. Paul

Nothing wrong with this AFAICS, but then some netloonproduced this blabla:

Says the brainless dimwit who thinks Neandertals couldn't hunt.