

Re: Born To Run: What Humans Really Evolved To Do

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.anthropology.paleo/2008-10/msg00146.html>

- From: RichTravsky <traRvEsky@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Fri, 17 Oct 2008 10:16:12 -0600
-

Claudius Denk wrote:

On Oct 5, 7:23 pm, RichTravsky <traRvE...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

Paul Crowley wrote:

RichTravsky wrote:

Claudius Denk wrote:

On Sep 15, 1:17 pm,
Andrew.Nowicki...@xxxxxxxxxxx
wrote:

The article
suggests that the first
running
hominid
was Homo
erectus.

Absurd. At best HE was ecologically dominant in their garden
habitat. They may have tragedged moderate
distances, but certainly

Garden habitat???? LOL – what the hell is that?

Re: Born To Run: What Humans Really Evolved To Do

It may not be exact but it is probably as good a term as anything else. It's the sort of habitat that humans do their best to recreate when they have the opportunity –