

Re: Scientists Find Prehistoric Dwarf Skeleton

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.anthropology/2004-11/0258.html>

From: mikelist (mikelist_at_tds.net)

Date: 11/15/04

Date: Mon, 15 Nov 2004 13:24:07 -0500

Pastor Dave wrote:

- > Because that Book is 110% right no matter what is found in the ground.
- > Scientists have their agenda and will stop at nothing to foster it.

Hyperbole doesn't work here, the extra 10% is the ego you have invested in it. Science, at no point is concerned with God, because He is not testable, definable (in a way that everyone would agree on), or observable. That would also apply to oversimplified biblical accounts. Are you saying that scientists should ignore what they see in favor of your ghost stories, if so you have no idea what science is, ergo you should cease posting here (a science newsgroup). If there is a God, he is likely wide as the universe, not as narrow as your vision.

Anthropologists, you can go home, nothing to see here, Dave has made clear the workings of the universe, and you needn't be curious about the specifics. He said so.