American Renaissance did a bid of an expose' on the myth of the Staunch Family Oriented Mexican.

That cheap labour also has disadvantages beyond the 3-4 times higher crime rate that mexicans bring. There is the displacement of White children from part time jobs and the displacement of the small White underclass from menial work and of course the displacement of the large Black underclass from gainfull employment. These groups once had a place or small niche in society: a place to start from, to have respect or to at least eek a reasonable life and spirit.

"Hispanic youths, whether recent arrivals or birthright American citizens," she reports "are developing an underclass culture....

Hispanic school dropout rates and teen birthrates are now the highest in the nation. Gang crime is exploding nationally --- rising 50 percent from 1999 to 2002--driven by the march of Hispanic immigration east and north across the country. Most worrisome, underclass indicators like crime and single parenthood do not improve over successive generations of Hispanics--they worsen."

Then there is the massive subsidisation of the health care system, the provision of 'affirmative action' to the the cost of Whites in either higher expenses or displacement of otherwise adaquet Whites from education and work. Becuase they are "White"

Consider the parasitic effect of the large 'diversitycrat' career crowd, the perversion of our politicians by hispandering.

That cheap labour is starting to look expensive.

What good is having the cheapest labour? It doesn't make a great society even for elites. The blowback is too inevitable to severe.

There are few menial tasks that can't be done better with automation.

There is not a fruit or vegetable that can not be harvested automatically by machinery. By providing cheap often illegal labour we displace the deployment of already existing automation that is of no great complexity. Managers and lawyers become a little lazy, the kinds of people that would rather hire 100 Mexicans illegally than hire a skilled contractor or hire an engineer and a few technicians to come up with a scheme. It encourages laziness. It encourages the development of low paying low tech nation and industries. The California orange industry is reeling due to competition from Brazil: Brazil has better crop harvesting automation whereas America has Mexicans.

The reason the Roman empire never developed an advanced technological society is because of the availability of cheap labour. Steam was confined to gimmicks such as opening temple doors.

You can buy a system for $300 US dollars to mow your lawn.

You can buy another system for a little more that

There is a better way to grow and improve our life than through the delusional sham of 'growth' by masses of cheap low skilled labour and a few elites that benefit.
