

Looking for a quote

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.anthropology/2005-07/msg00017.html>

- From: Elliot Richmond <xmrichmond@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sun, 24 Jul 2005 01:27:07 GMT
-

Dear group,

I, like you, dislike "drive-by postings" but I am hoping you can tolerate this one.

I am trying to chase down a quote. The quote describes the popular perception of anthropology and culture as "native" peoples of some foreign land with:

"a person clothed in a jungle suit and wearing a pith helmet, lying in a hammock under the palm trees on some South Seas Island, watching gorgeous brown-skinned men and women dance, while lazily jotting things down in a small notebook."

I had previously attributed this quote to:

Kottak, C. P. (1978). Anthropology: The Exploration of Human Diversity. New York, Random House

But I can't find it there and it doesn't really sound like Kottak anyway.

Does anybody recognize this?

Thanks in advance for your help.

Elliot Richmond
Freelance Science Writer and Editor

- Follow-Ups:
 - ◆ Re: Looking for a quote
 - ◇ From: Professor Omega
- Prev by Date: ibogaine: ethnographic studies
- Next by Date: Re: Looking for a quote
- Previous by thread: ibogaine: ethnographic studies

Looking for a quote

- Next by thread: Re: Looking for a quote
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread