Bill,

the map DOES have Alaska on it.

It's up in the left corner.

Compare what's there not with some funny imaginative Europe but with Alaska shown on maps made by Dutch Cartographers who had had close contact with the Scandinavian Royalty and Nobility in their own background and/or in the background of the person who the NA Greenland information is said to originate from.

You can't win this one.

You lost the minute you didn't look more closely at the projection forms used at that time.
