>From the discussion on Germans in ancient Europe, it is revealed that China was actually founded by German-speaking Saxons. The emperor at circa 200 BC was called "Qin, Emperor of the Saxon people". He called himself "Sichuan-Di" which means the same as "Emperor of Saxons". This exciting fact means Saxons were living in a broad empire starting in Germany and England, through the Middle-east, to China and even possibly Japan (Ainu were Indo-European).
