

Re: Indo–Aryan Migration in <<Several Waves>>

Source: <http://sci.tech–archive.net/Archive/sci.archaeology/2005–03/2380.html>

From: Parayan (parayan_at_blackplanet.com)

Date: 03/18/05

Date: 17 Mar 2005 22:15:41 -0800

Virendra wrote:

> Parayan wrote:

> > Virendra wrote:

> > > Brablo wrote:

> > > > I've heard time and time again that the Indo–Aryans who migrated > > > > towards the sub–continent at around 1800 BC arrived in many > > > migratory

> > > > waves similarly to the way the Europeans colonized the Americas.

> I

> > > have several questions about this.

> > >

> > > What motivated the so called Indo–Aryans to migrate towards South

> > Asia?

> > >

> > > The speciality about 1800 BC date is that due to earth movement around > > > that time Saraswati river dried out and the people surrounding it > > > migrated in different directions. This caused disappearance of an > > > earlier advanced civilization in Indus valley. If this is true

then > > the > > > origin of Indo Aryans does not lie in central asia or the Europe as > > > historians have been saying.

> >

> > You must be correct. Then Central Asians and Europeans must be people > > of punya–bhoomy (holy land of hindus)

>

> Is this the reason how whole of current Aryan Invasion theory based > upon – white supremacy? If one believes in true scientific inquiry, > other viewpoints need to be taken into account to get rid of personal > or racial biases. I just threw an idea from another perspective and > there is no need for you to expose your narrow mindedness.

sci.archaeology: Re: Indo–Aryan Migration in <<Several Waves>>

Can't Central Asians and Europeans be people of holy lands?

If I hurt your religious sentiments, I am extremely sorry.

But I cannot understand why Central Asians and Europeans should not be people
of holy lands.