This is directed to all of us.

Nothing prevents a person with one disorder from having others.
Sometimes several others.

Nothing prevents a person with other disorders from believing that they 'have' something different.
Or pretending that they do.

Nothing prevents persons from coming to misinformed conclusions about what 'typical' disorders look like, based upon limited, non-random and too-small samples.

But something should prevent us from getting TOO FAR into amateur psychological diagnoses, on an archaeological newsgroup.

Now, if you want to take this to a psychological newsgroup...

Just my opinion, and yes, there are loonies out there... and in here.
