BC?

no. do you have a reference
to support this assertion?

p.s. mark your snips.

Please pay attention to the 2 links on Best and Reinhold... respectively I already gave in our Thread here on sci.arch that I started.

If you click them, I believe you will agree that I indeed have "a reference to support
this assertion".

no, i dont agree.

Carl is presently having the same frustrating experience in talk.origins that he is having here. Apparently, two complete Usenet newsgroups, both populated by some truly gifted people, cannot seem to grasp Carl's gifts, nor appreciate that he offers wonders beyond their ken. If they would only give themselves over to his Socratic ministrations.

And in soc.history.ancient.
(Not sure about the truly gifted people though)

I wonder whether Marc Washington might be moved to converse with Carl? They are both prophets without honor in their adopted newsgroups.

Re: Were one to read Robert Best and Walter Reinhold..., our Flood is local with Noah an historical figure

On the contrary soc.history.ancient is a big success for me.
All my evidence was put into the links I gave. All done.
This means my priority was to get backup onto NG(s).
For conversation to follow is almost too much for me to expect but I could be wrong.

I was polite but firm with people throughout.

If people don't want to click links or aren't interested,
so be it.

BTW, I told Matt Giwer that it would most probably take 3 solid hours of study for him to go thru the 4 links I gave
on calendar – OPENING WEDGE, not based on "ThieringCodes", for the reader to get a handle on Thiering Methodology –
a VERY DIFFICULT SUBJECT!

Let's move on to archaeology, please.
