Yeah, so what's your point Uncle Bob? Are these people hurting you in any way? Wasn't the one who was doing the most damage politely removed and, in fact, an open email address had been provided to receive any final complaints about that person? And I do believe that particular post explained what had happened and why those posts occurred. Ever consider that maybe, just maybe, students have access to the same computer and are told NOT to use real names so they're not spammed to death. Perhaps as many as 20 astronomy students have access to usenet during most hours of the day from the same computer. Who knows. I can tell you one thing though in your little analysis here... John Patterson should NOT be among the names you list... at least not posting from this computer.

"John"
