Actually it is.....

My older son graduated college a year ago as a programmer.
(a VERY good one at that he is moving to downtown SF now)

And as he told me. If Mac's were as popular as PC's, they would get attacked just as much.
These people are out after an audience, and PC's give them the biggest audience possible.....

Or as one of hacker friends told me, they do it for fun, and the fun is getting to the most machines possible in the shortest time possible.....
(same kid who told me that they hack computers for fun, and because they CAN... When I told him I could beat his ass, because I can, so why shouldnt I, he had no answer.... I told him it would be great fun too, he didnt like that..... Little rat bastards these hackers are.....)

These people could care less about brand names, they are after as big a target audience as possible, and Windows operating systems givem them just that !

Mac's are no safer to PC's except for the fact there are so FEW of them compared to PC's, that hackers who want attention go to where the people are.....

And hackers who want $$ go after PC's as that is what financial institutions use almost exclusively.
