CATASTROPHES

There are a few strange people on the spaced-out Internet, who cry out songs of danger to make the readers fret.

Ignoring real known problems of nature, and of man, they favor the catastrophes they cooked up in their pans.

They know very little science to start them on their way, but what they know they misconstrue, to conjure up Doomsday.

They have their own pet theories to give them all "their" facts, with little of validity in logic, science, or tact.

Some falsely claim the planets line up to spawn earthquakes.
While others say space aliens will be landing in your state!

Some fear the Earth's cold poles may flip, with devastation all around, but without the facts to back their claims they just look like bad clowns.

They claim the sun is run amok, the Dow-Jones crash is near.
Predicted in the rising stars, (or after too much beer).

They blare forth dire predictions of disasters, death, and doom.

Re: What the Solar System is Really Like

Scaring newbies into sweating fits and driving veterans from the room.

These people seek mere notice and attention from news groups.
They argue there, most heatedly, getting "jumpers" through their hoops.

They pounce on those who doubt their claims,
with personal attacks,
in childish rants and lengthy raves, ignoring real hard facts.

They are NOT nice, remain silent when posts of theirs are seen.
A reply makes YOU a real target for the venting of their spleens.

The year two-thousand's come and gone, and with it, more wild nuts, without responses to their cries, they should finally shut up!
