"Now if we could just invent a light drive we could nip off to a point a couple of millennia away....."

And you'd poop and fall in it if we could because of the sudden jolt of shock you'd have.

"Then point our telescopes back at the bum Jesus and his gay, hippy mates sponging off the unwashed and uneducated locals..."

Sorry, don't think so. This is something you have burned into your feeble mind.

"It's all a matter of interpretation of the evidence. The experi-mental evidence is that some people will believe absolutely anything. Emphasis on the "mental". Anybody who places his belief in anything said by the illiterate, unwashed and uneducated peasants of the time, but recorded several hundred years later, should be encouraged to go into the streets of their own locality and talk to their present equivalent for signs of intelligent life. Then ask them to articulate their personal observations of a local "magician" with special powers and severe problems with the authorities. The latter apparently completely unable to find the thick file on the trouble maker and his gang of wasters despite a pedantic obsession with paperwork and spying on potentially dangerous locals to keep them under the central control of the evil dictator back in Rome. This would be the modern equivalent of the local branch of the CIA losing their files on Osama Bin Laden and Al-Qaeda when Bush was in power. It didn't happen."

It is exactly this type of thinking that was responsible for His death, and also the current crumbling of the world. Morality has gone by the wayside and it is only a matter of time before things started getting very bad.

You can choose to look at religion the way you want. Apparently, you choose the most negative, most liberal view probably based on some poor past experience that you never got past. That's just the kind of thinking/excuses that attempt to derail the other 92% of the nation that are believers, but fortunately your type of thinking doesn't yet prevail. Wow on to the world if it ever does.

Re: Without objection

And I'll bet you're one of the many who accept the Big Bang Theory or even The Big Crunch when there's hardly a shred of evidence to support either.
