Dear borg 'Vanilla Gorilla (Monkey Boy)',
Apparently it's not MAILGATE that sucks, as it's the normal laws of physics that suck, and thereby all that's supposedly hard-science can't but suck no matters what. Only those mainstream conditional laws of physics need be applied whenever questioning whatever's lord NASA certified, and otherwise everything becomes even more skewed if it involves our resident warlord and the likes of those extremely stealth WMD.

It looks as though I've become a little out of touch with other realities, such as those of David Sereda. Sorry about that previous old link that has become off-line. I just searched for 'david sereda' or 'david sereda video' and came up with the following; and it seems the list goes on and on. Thus perhaps if you're into the likes of whatever's incoming and/or passing nearby Earth that's defying the laws of gravity, that of kinetic energy as well as emitting a strong energy signature within the UV spectrum, in that case there's yet another realm of modern day physics that apparently didn't exist before now. At least NASA doesn't have a freaking official clue as to anything other than their usual disinformation-R-us status quo of snookering humanity.

Since my PC is still being so thoughtfully infected by best of the best NSA/MI6 spooks, as well as experiencing loads of online delays while others tap into and/or block whatever I'm doing, in fact there's so much of their MS accommodated back-door mainstream status quo incest sperm as DNA poison on my hard-drive, so much so that if I exported my PC contents into the internet I believe that mine alone could bring down the entire global network within hours, and/or it'll somehow infect the world with a worse
