To see which posters are so-called "kookdancers", simply watch which ones post a response and add a bunch of irrelevant newsgroups to the distribution. Another good indicator is to note which of those responders follow a person to one or more of those irrelevant newsgroups and engage in their antagonism there. Also look for those that are proud of the number of disruptive postings they make to the newsgroups or who pontificate about the multiple newsgroups being relevant. Those who waste their time on meaningless "kook" polls also fall into the category. Another sign are those who hypocritically complain about the same "tripe" being posted over and over while posting the same "tripe" over and over, who talk of cowardice and yet post with a fake name, and who tell others to shut up but won't shut up themselves.
