So what is humanity waiting for?

A movement that is more than one Ehren Watada, yes he is right, we know history.

And humanity turned away. And yet history also knows (not today) that what Bush did was a harsh equivalent of racial cleansing!!!

Some see it, and the world image corresponds to a hopeless arrogance. Everything we saw in history is overruled. We saw the fall of Ceausescu because he wanted to wipe out Romanian villages with 1000 year old cultures, the majority in Romania lived in villages, the soldiers came from villages, and Ceausescu ordered to industrialize the country and move all people to cities and establish what he called 'an American style landscape with large industries and no villages, like in the USA'.

I was only a few miles from the Romanian border in the late Autumn and Winter and followed the events on the radio. I was there, hearing the reporter hiding in the hotel window and transmitting how the military that arrived with tanks are shooting at the people who gathered in front of a Church where they tried to keep their priest from being moved after he received a relocation order. Hundreds died I think that day on that square, but only days later the entire country rose against Ceausescu's mass relocation plan. The Hungarian radio was speaking to all Romanians through the border encouraging them to stand up against Ceausescu. I was listening to the events with a beating heart on a small radio and spent the night up in a similar fashion to when the Iraq war broke out and all radio stations spoke of the Iraq war. Do you remember? The radio stations stopped all their regular programming for a week. I saw horrible crimes happening against Democracy, and those horrors are not gone in the USA and in the Arab world, humanitarian horrors gone blind. Like in Romania.
