

Re: Evolution

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.astro/2007-09/msg00191.html>

- From: gb7648@xxxxxxxxxx
 - Date: Tue, 18 Sep 2007 15:50:38 -0700
-

It may be papaya but not slipping on a banana skin, bananas are slipping away in political totalitarian orientations of societies, ethical guidelines take one financial viewpoint: may evolution not interfere.

The banana business is not mine. Genetically transformed green papayas, even sweetened by artificial sweeteners to taste like bananas. It's just not the same. It's just not the same. Everybody knows that, but eventually there will not be any bananas, and any means any, regardless of the scientific attempts to genetically transform fruits to mimick bananas in appearance, taste, for cooking, for all things in life, even for banana spits. The United States forces replaced mentalities on evolution. What do I mean by that? A replaced mentality is something the CCCP had, as it replaced life with a fabric, and the fabric said: "no bananas. Only Russian bananas.

Russian bananas, what would that be? To find out, let's look deeper into the banana business and why the bananas that lost seeds a long time ago perhaps due Capitalist manipulation and unable to carry on reproduction are not being saved from dieing out in as little as 15 years as a fruit:

In Austin Texas where people of all ages go out on weekends, riot police is present in black uniforms. This type of police force are usually present during protests and riots. They wear riot helmets, breeth like Darth Vader, listen to scattered radio signals and might be bored and imitating the signalless tuning radio distortion noises by pulling air in through their touns, or might be exchanging secret communication, but the sound of the walky talky radio is present with some distant conversation coming in momentarily. They are not allowed to talk with people and await special government orders. Their presence is for tarnishing people of the state, a presence of big brother that displays a direct message of intolerance in ways George Bush displays a direct message of intolerance in politics.

You have to see what human rights sees and what educated people think of tarnishing regimes and of superpowers.

Banning rights, teaching violence, displaying intolerance against the same things China banned their citizens from on Tianenmen Square, a portray of big brother taking precedence, and something horrible arises in a Western country known for freedom, something of extremist nature to feel that one must stay home 'as Jews in World War II', that one is not free, that one must see riot police and feel in danger of retaliation, for unknown reasons, and a sense of black and white is growing in the United States, as well as in the eyes of the entire world.

Re: Evolution

George Bush now represents a real regime that is not welcoming, a regime that discriminates and wants totalitarian police taking a presence that is beyond ordinary humanity and freedom of life. A life that is watched by evesdropping, a corruption unfolds unprecedented with racism taking dictatorship in it's will to violate civil rights, to totalitarianly confiscate rights for big brother and banning rights for being able to disagree. I don't think the USA will go into a civil war, Texas is known for radical extremist nightmare and human rights web pages always list Texas for abuse of power and police corruption involving racism and cops aiming for running politics. It's a cop state.

Colorado is not clean of these problems. In Highlands Ranch there is a no cruising law, while it is a city and not a small community. No cruising means only purpose driving from one location to another. As that not a welcoming place, as that a characteristic of Texas, though there is a 'Welcome to the Pride of Colorado' sign when arriving to Highlands Ranch with a suburb polutation of around 75 thousand.

When I wrote about this problem to Highlands Ranch I think it was in 2003, the CIA came to investigate me about that letter, yet I only raised humanitarian concerns. It also reminds me of a Swedish Ph.D student in Colorado Springs who held a seminar while studying at the University of Colorado, Colorado Springs, her seminar was on what she thinks could improve politics in the United States and what she would change. Her seminar was broken up by men in black who wore wires in her ear and everybody was sent home. It is unclear who these men dressed to appear as CIA agents were, but when I was investigated I felt in a similar circumstance that voicing opinion on the United States is not welcome in the United States, only by licenced politicians. Sensitivity to the topic of discussing what's better for the United States. Old racism.

"Racism is chronic, corruption is not normal."

Racism is a horrible historical corruption in the United States. Everything the Bush administration does is highly racist. 80–90 percent of Arabs think negatively of Americans today as a result of the Iraq war. Bush's initiation of the Iraq war reminded of racist crimes of going after lookalikes in murderous hate, as once happened in an American car factory where two factory workers picked up baseball bats and killed the first oriental man in sight in rage and hate when they lost jobs to Japanese competitors. The man they killed was a Chinese immigrant. President Bush went with the same indiscriminate hate against Saddam and used the moment of 9/11's first anniversary to declare war on grounds reminding of passionate rage and hate. When President Bush launched the Iraq war Gorbachev immediately said that what Bush is doing is political suicide.

Re: Evolution

In parts of the world where tarnishing discriminates and robs people of freely living their lives on the streets, criminal power dictates and the rage that this type of governments represent through police power is unpredictable and wrong for basic life. Of course in a capitalist country people should be able to go out without the presence of a government. That itself is freedom. There is a pervasive, racist atmosphere.

If Osama's interest was to spark racism and hate, look at what George Bush did. 80–90 percent of Arabs now think negatively of Americans. This is what the world is just dying from, Americans are seen as the worst, as the racism Bush created far overwhelms Osama's expectations of sparking race and hate. Look around at the corruption.

So here I am in 2007, grasping the same exact things that were on my mind when the Iraq war came about originally and the CIA was investigating me for a letter about political content. Things have grown to become a lot more problematic with the closed minded USA since, as racism, tarnishing, and a closed community–driven society that benefits the big government has now grown to a super–corrosion in regards to world politics. The world is too huge, even for the United States, but there are also very few people like me who can separate the problems in clear perspective. Most people feel that United States has brought a racist tarnishing madness over the world, and human rights do not accept racism, Kofi Annan said the Iraq war is illegal, it is corruption. Bush hopes the world will buy into his wars, and uses his given strength. It strains all human rights to see that Bush decided to undertake matters of war crimes, humanitarian departments, and use logic that baffles intelligence of a person on rights, lawyer logic.

Corruption of extreme racist neglect, criminal abuse of entire races for the crimes of a few, racist abuse of cultures, people, of Iraqis, of all Arabs by tarnishing all for the USA capitalist power, by erecting an Iraq that is a model for all Arab countries, one better than Arabs. The removal of Saddam and liberation of those who seemed to welcome slavery more than liberation. Some places welcome liberation, others correspond with catastrophic cultural crimes against humanities, from the playing of Western music loudly in Iraqi villages by military order, by all human rights was considered an illegal invasion.

Super–corruption of human rights. Why is humanity forced to see this? It is almost as if the United States fell, it shouldn't have. Can't even impeach President Bush, can't even sentence him with crimes against humanity, the English called President Bush a bubble boy.

Re: Evolution

In other countries presidents who conspire are removed. Here he was reelected, thus aside all racism, this war is of the American people. George Soros tried to bring human reason for people to see a racist corruption separating people, humanity, life, and some things are not allowed. Kofi Annan said this war is not allowed, Gorbachev said it is political suicide. Racist extremism in power turned the world away from the USA which has become totalitarian owner of all decisions, of all security, of an invasion that the world fears, people snitched from other countries, not given lawyers in secret prisons, Abu Ghraib tortures, rape of cultures.

I immediately said when the Iraq war broke out: Ceausescu. Ceausescu was the same blind, and raped culture. Crimes against humanity, and it is humanity that tends to rise against such things. Humanity protested and awaits, while politicians are following protocols and are silent. It should be people's job to see things like 'safety cannot compromise racism'. Human history. If safety compromises racism it is corruption against culture, sovereignty, humanity. Possessive mania drives security. Ceausescu sat in his office and wrote silently, outside the hall stood men motionlessly. If a political leader's sole responsibility is security, he is pretty much a dictator. What is a dictator? He runs everything himself and uses a system that all must abide to, while also represses people, and forces all to abide to dictatorial decisions and qualities, a presence of a non-political repression enslaves all to serve the higher power against people's will, no other decisions take place as the dictator's.

Let's read it once again with Bush in mind: He runs everything himself and uses a system that all must abide to, while also represses people, and forces all to abide to dictatorial decisions and qualities, a presence of a non-political repression enslaves all to serve the higher power against people's will, no other decisions take place as the dictator's.

This has become the exact characteristic of Bush's Iraq war, set on American people to serve as norm, on the World, on the entire Arab culture, a dislikable nature reminding of the darkest cold brutality of the CCCP's decisions, non-compromizable, iron in curtain.

Of course the USA has a Democratic party, as that there is no iron curtain and a slow emergence of New Direction initiated as a contra thinking to the blatancy all this war represents. The Iraq war itself flamed into existence completely unexpectedly for almost everybody and was launched out of rage and political framing, using terrorism to blame others, and giving rise to irresponsible and unprecedented harm, as racism is what was created in levels most couldn't believe. It seems he doesn't care about racism, but only of the goal. He figured it all out on 9/11/2002 and went for it on 9/12/2002 and everybody knew it. A tiny light of opportunity arose on 9/11/2002 in President Bush's mind when he met on TV with the families of the WTC victims, and there he stood, some say President Bush was so overwhelmed he had tears in his eyes, I recall his eyes flashing right and left on TV, it was like a scene from JFK's killing, it was so obvious, a conspiracy in the making in his mind, and people awaiting his decision to launch war against Saddam. It wasn't unexpected, but horribly offending. He was provoking Saddam for two months on the weapons inspections as in July of 2002 Saddam suddenly invited the weapons inspectors in, but Bush backed off with a Dinero 'are you kidding with me' aptitude. Bullying was exchanged, most outsiders settled with the idea of having both Bush and Saddam shot and solve the problem. It was insane.

Re: Evolution

Conspiracies were harmfully bothering. The world wondered if Iraq being the largest oil country under US hands and Bush being an oil man and so is Cheney an oilman, if it's all a mistake. The Iraq war was launched as Operation Iraq Liberation for a day? Was it about oil? The name changed several times. In the White House correspondents said on CNN that President Bush does not have to reveal his financial plans, everything seemed bothering. People were crying from an obvious hate blowing, screwing up all of the United States for corruption in politics, unbearable conditions. Corruption is not a new thing in the United States. Dislikable it has become, those liberated seemed to hate American soldiers most, but I am not a historian, I won't go over the events of the war in a JFK murder mystery fashion.

What matters: 80–90 percent of Arabs think negatively of American citizens according to the latest poll by a Jewish Political Institute in Israel. If Osama wanted to create racism and hate, look what Bush did. He turned the entire Arab world into hating Americans. Osama is nothing compared to what Bush was able to achieve. According to the poll made by this Jewish Political Institute Americans and Arabs got along well in the past, regardless of politics. The world developed a bad opinion of the USA, naturally as racism went to deep into political interests. Europe called all the early Iraq war documents mad (incredibly insane claims, unrealistic). What matters is that human atrocities were committed by creating racism, worse than any terrorist could do. An overkill of World War II style politics that once separated countries between the US and SU (Soviet Union), reversed logic as CCCP and PPPC. Gorbachev spoke out against this late July of 2007 that Bush acts based on unprecedented status as the CCCP would have prevented the Iraq war at the time.

Unprecedented status brings back the Nixon era when wiretapping went so dirty that even Democratic political leaders found wiretaps and Nixon resigned. An unprecedented status used by the CCCP and the USA granted full military and system power, and as that it took control from the people to pursue inner politics by tarnishing system orientation, an orientation of super-politics, power abuse, totalitarian undertaking. The unprecedented status granted to the head of power takes dictatorial steps to resolve all political decisions.

Re: Evolution

Corruption emerges, political enemies are sought, not real political enemies of the country, but enemies of the system itself. John Lennon too has become a political enemy of the system and was watched by the CIA. He found illegal phone wiretaps in his apartment and sued the US government for illegal wiretapping.

Today NOBODY can sue for illegal wiretapping, the idea 'justice for all' does not apply as the unprecedented status is granted to the head of power and to the system itself. Gorbachev spoke of unprecedented status taking role. It is corruption. Today all monitoring is automated through phone companies, raising the unprecedented status making it granted as convenience 'and necessary' to President Bush, though he would not be interested to hear why Nixon resigned, the same old qualities are immensely dictated by President Bush. Racism is not an accepted crime in all countries, especially not in international politics. Look at the racism that was created. How harming is that for the USA? Unprecedented control took place over too much, so much hatred between people was not around. Bush is a super-terrorist in that regard whose racism went so blind and this notion formed New Direction, that all are left speechless about hello, can we talk, or is it still closed doors. "Ok, terrorists are bad, terrorists arise from small groups, he is running a war on terrorism but it is a liberation of Iraq now", but the Iraqis were not welcoming liberation and everybody was offended. It was blatancy at it's best, a war not allowed by human rights, it wanted revenge, undertaking of an oil country, a totalitarian conversion of their culture, but in manners horrifying the most simple-minded observer that Western music was played in Iraqi villages very loudly by the military based on orders.

Ceausescu's invasion of Romanian villages brought back memories that some things are not allowed to be invaded. Ceausescu adored the USA and he too said he wanted to establish a USA style country where things would change in terms of the economy, Ceausescu did not have respect for village life and wanted something a lot richer, for which he fell for crimes against humanity. He was to change Romania's lifestyle in an unprecedented form, violating the sovereignty of Romania's culture. No, Bush cannot impose a western country idea on Iraq. It's illegal. The Iraqi people didn't welcome it, and as that it was crimes against humanity. People who are educated see that only in recent history, that ideas of reform are not about one interest. That old interest or not, racism is just wrong and George Soros would agree. It is all of the world that got stalked into this situation. The United States was known as a country that would stand against regimes like Ceausescu's Romania, and everything got messed up (in terms of human rights). The fascist police cannot take precedence. I say this war brings back the Nixon era pervasiveness, in other words nothing changed in America, a slight reform under New Direction, which Bush will as well direct including all of human rights establishments, like Ceausescu who took control of all departments in his country, Bush runs the world, even crosses out of pictures of killed terrorists himself. Passionate undertaking. Gorbachev back in late July spoke of Bush undertaking matters of the world, and Gorbachev did say that nobody can be allowed to do that, and Kofi Annan probably referred to the same thing when he said the Iraq war is illegal. To do that signifies a dictatorship, a World Dictatorship. Osama was nothing compared to the racism Bush created, and Saddam was nothing compared to that kind of a dictatorship arising. Perverts. Nobody can be that powerful, one has to follow international agreements else things break in racism and totalitarian overkill. Any such Democratic questions in the past were dismissed immediately by Republicans, a sense of repression by political advantage that only knew laughter and shame: 'us and them', without a place for 'the right thing to do and reserved for other purposes'.

Re: Evolution

The right thing to do is an immediate establishment of international standards. Don't try to outfear terrorists or outfear and outdictate dictators but work internationally to resolve these problems. Meanwhile some places are not as much interested in negotiating, and the state of affairs await the riot police officers in Austin, Texas. "I am spotting a pervert. How do I know? I am positive. Should we move in? Awaiting orders." No sound, just distortion. Two riot police officers look toward each other and continue exchanging radio signals. One is saying: "I feel I ate too much just from beeing here." The other: "I feel highly intoxicated. Look, human rights departments are watching us." Riot helmet slowly turns.

In a horrendous game of world power, in so many ways presidential, where pervasiveness grows, see Google's Streetview, 'another new product with coming up with excuses', the usual privacy answers are answered as by the White House Administration's serious-faced representative to the media, 'camerizing' of the world is at question by a word gramatically derived from the act of scrutiny through unwelcome cameras of big brother, Democracy, the questions take place with media around, but few who can interfere, a mentality of running big, and here, out of religion almost, conspiracies fill the air from both sides of the political front, with business unclear to most of the population and as that it expects to presume that environment. Something that one may want most may be right in front of him. In other parts of the world there is diplomacy, and questioning arise as should we trust powers? When will the seemingly safest bet turn into the most horrific one? Let's not ask OJ Simpson. Just how far can humanity be played out, and when do questions of corruption arise, and the game goes on. As long as fear and chaos is around, a superpower does not feel it needs to be worried. As long as millions turn to piracy on the Internet, Google feels it has a save haven for openly excruciating, while Google is growing to become largest software company in the world perhaps some time in the next year, and as an excruciating power over the Internet, it runs a big brother business without hard feelings toward Democracy and human rights. The megalostalking nature of an empire grows to become unstoppable, takes on a course in which it becomes an us and them monopoly of power, a pervasive dominant giant over it's territory, and a horrendous history of conquer and divide brings back memories of empires to be for some and empires to fear for others, in barbarism taken by one over all, as. As. No comparison. Empire divided by us and them, or loyalists and slaves. Should we allow Google to take an up-close 3D snapshot of all streets and upload a big brother know-how. All of human literature opposed ideas of a big brother, but Google even confiscated all of that under its dominance by stolen works of arts and humanities, business ownerships to books ignored and for profit Google copied 15 million international books. As always using the power of courts and system to thrive as that, meaning they build a political atmosphere that they respect laws. "They own literature." By all definition excruciating and evil. It comes to: does a system accept corruption, or is it a world of police. Google plays the other side, yet manipulates the same noble humanity through excruciating it through politics by a 'runs in a family' atmosphere. It becomes a giant big picture of questions of excruciation, as well as racism in the USA and the all-so usual smile of big brother keeping all under the notion that everything is under expectations, and humanity is left feeling excruciated and out of the way by those who say they know what they are doing and claim no excruciation of any kind is taking place as there is a close tie to the rule of law and notion of legitimacy.

Re: Evolution

I merely understood what Gorbachev was speaking about in late July. I don't expect president Bush to sit down with politicians, nor can I endorse it. For some that is good enough to take precedence. Because even I, with the lowest IQ in journalism (70) was able to figure out what Gorbachev was saying back in late July and I am telling you what he was saying was worthy of newspapers. There is a mind in there, things that come up during conversation. "3D snapshot of all rich people's homes. They are going to get busted like OJ Simpson during their next laundering raid." Beware of politics. They told me I should let loose when I write. Conquered and divided by us and them, intelligence comes late for some, never for others. Excruciatingly, painfully, and alone. I wrote to human rights departments for comment, but they did not return my emails. Reporting from Azbajastan, up to you, Rechy! Forget the mid-East crisis, how do you solve the world crisis? What do you think Gorbachev will do next? He is 76, do you think time is running out for him?

Rechy: I am not the fastest reporter either in following the events. What was the question?

Returning to me. Wait, I have a better question. Google says millions engage in pirating, so they are limitless about that type of business. How do you feel about that? You have a pretty long mustache. Can you stick your tongue out and grab hold of it with your lips? Can you muffle on it?

Rechy: Google, yes indeed it blows my mustache to tell you the truth. What was that about my mustache? I couldn't hear you so well. Can you repeat the question, I could swear I heard you asking me to bite my mustache.

Re: Evolution

Me: No, you can sniff it, it's what it's for, but don't bite it, big bugs do that. Well, that's all the time I have, reporting live online from Asbajastan on revising, the humanitarian side, of the Launch, was that Lunch? Of the Iraq War. What really went wrong in the early Iraq war, in the humanitarian sense, how does this picture work, and when advantage is abused, and could a solution be as simple as handing out in return tarnishing dinky wipes? The mind is puzzled by those not having a problem with radical extremism dominating culture, with a culture of radical extremism taking it's norms to where politicians around the world speak of world dictatorship, and as that of a great comoter of a higher cause attributing world power in ways he cannot.

From mice and men: We are not that crazy, I mean we are, "but maybe we don't want to be that." Seriously.

Nobody needs this Iraq war, and it's best if it stops, excruciating governments beat the solution and people are munching on their mustaches around the world. What Gorbi comes up with next effects the whole world, because it really effects everybody, and there is chronic humanitarian problem ongoing since the launch of the Iraq war that prompted 15 million protesters worldwide at once against cowboy human rights violation, CORRUPTION, revenge, cowboy heroism, big brother, and racist extremism. Bush responded to 15 million protesters around the world: The number one duty of the United States is security. My first impression was: it is an obvious crimes against humanity and human rights corruption. In days of slavery the situation was the same. Some owned the world, others walked in line, linched. I didn't cry. I wanted to. My mother said Bush is Hitler. I said Bush is Ceausescu running his remodeling project in the face of humanity, but Bush turned Hitler to take the course to the end. Nobody could agree. As Soros said, it was us and them, senses of humanitarian crimes were undoubted by all of humanity. My mother was right. A racist Hitler is what this situation has become. Safety cannot compromise racism or else it is corruption. Just look at the racism. Bush is a classic dictator, a carried away man of his own ideals and politics with remodeling projects that were common during World War II and exercised under supremacist blatancies of a regime, that has much less to do with in the general population's mind today of what reality is. In 2003 any of these words would have the CIA all over me, and newspapers feared back then to publish anything sensitive, not a word of the first Iraq war protests for three weeks where people were taken off the streets of Washington DC with giant fishing nets, as always there was a Google excuse that someone parked illegally or something. Google: "We are not doing anything that's not already common information. If somebody uses the incredibly realistic technology of Streetview to peek into other people's homes' windows' , that's not our wrong doing. Anybody can go to the streets and see the same thing." Those who repress Democracy and humanity by religion are highly criminal, and Google's Library Project stepped heavily into stolen works of arts and humanity. Justifying crimes for business, be it political or commercial in the USA is getting too boring and ridiculously criminal.

Re: Evolution

Big brother expects us to be passified and defend ourselves, but they are with that kind of 'cold' nature doing it just so we feel colder, and colder, and colder, like Bush. Business standards sunk into the mindset of the biggest who abuses the system to it's eek into totalitarian death of all ethics, while told by the most easygoing person dying from pervasive big brother underground crime dominating all sides of things in a totalitarian movement and course of humanitarian abuse, neglect and torture, all inclined toward a world of policies, the 20th century mentality of all that went wrong in the World. In 2007 half of Americans reported feeling depressed at work, the effect of sociological relentlessness and power falling to the hands of a few is yet to be uncovered. Even though it is far far worse in the UK, big brother police cameras are arising in the streets in San Francisco and elsewhere, Democrats united in the sense of the meaning of New Direction as a repression is arising unethically with or without the Iraq war, this place is losing taste and a sense of quality to life. If all is about security, discrimination blooms under power and it becomes a deathbed for humanity, a stereoscopical life to live in Orwell's first book 1884, if I have the information correct.

From days of slavery, the message is this: Those who repress are bad.

Get out of it. Those in courts not seeing racism and hate crimes by two men who picked up baseball bats and went after their enemy, an oriental man who was a Chinese immigrant in murderous rage as they lost jobs to Japanese car makers and sought collateral damage, blood, is ill-fated racism and crime, as the judge saw only two American men who would remind most of President Bush's courage as he went after Saddam in ill-fated racist hate in the eyes of the world, using passion as means to exterminate a lookalike as he reminds of the problems. Politically, that is what happened, and to ignore racism as the judge did in court and refuse to accept that the sons of his nation are ill-fated criminals of power who refuse to accept faith as non-American bolshevism, radical extremism fueled violence as a response to Osama's act and resolutions that the World couldn't tolerate and seen it as illegal justice and claims and causes for violence.

Those who feel they must gestapo the society, the chronic illness of big brother is demented, unstoppable by the drives within to take care of ALL problems, be it in the most violent forms imaginable. Remember, not even in the most conservative religious places seek police cameras in the street as standard, only in the most horrific dictatorships, and the phenomena is growing disturbingly above world significances, things that none could allow in the past are now seen as cameras watching, a phenomena that discards all politics for corruption in power. To have cameras in the street, one needs an empire, as that an emperor investing in full security, a militia in power whose politicians embrace in matters of war in the face of all human rights, a parliament whose members vote 100 percent for war regardless of the facts, and humanity remembers Ceausescu in power, a feeling of repression. A place reminding of a sad death to humanity, to happiness, to anything that once was, seems destroyed, confiscated by power, fascist delusion and corruption never ending.

Re: Evolution

It's not about wow, how dare we solve the Iraq war!!! it's about how dare we not interfere. This dare problem Mr. President... you know, bananas are a dieing fruit. It is what brought us monkeys to life. This seedless fruit is dieing out, unable to mutate. We have 15 years reserve. If president Bush would have spent as much money on saving bananas, it would make sense. Corruption, and 'face' it like a monkey, but if you are a monkey, the paradise is in danger. In this war even a Godfather might agree: With each war, we loose an opportunity to save a fruit. What will our split banana puddings look like? Why are we murdering each other off when there is an opportunity awaits in frozen banana smuggling. Split banana pudding, only for the rich and famous. Imagine... let me whisper it into your ear: "people will kill for it". Our last monkey pride is slipping away right in front of our fingers, and who cares about where we came from, who we are. We need sense out of this corruption of us and them mafia logic and build a new business. Let the world evolve on it's own paste, and this evolution we need to harness. Don't try to become a big shot with one shot that solves it all. You gotta do what you gotta do. Don't try to be a big shot in the face of the world and wipe out everything in the process. It is harming. You don't solve racism by creating it. Even my cousin knows. Sure you solve one problem. Force a rule of law as a Sheriff and muster it with politics, with tarnishing. The world is about friendship, not racist tarnishing! Anybody could tell you. And if you are the most powerful man alive, gotta use your gift for the better things in life. Need to harness on that evolution, or all that is going to be left is sour genetically deformed green papaya.

Violence is not all it takes to be a bad guy, or to tarnish in a sense as it was with slaves. Having the opportunity to save bananas and then what does one in power do? DISMISS EVOLUTION BY TAKING FULL COURSE ON IT THROUGH PRIVATE MATTERS IS WHAT COMMUNISTS OR HITLER DID! For Hitler bananas were not from the German soil, for the Communists it represented Capitalist corruption. As that, evolution as a word is aimed at instant removal and all people were obligated toward the common collective, toward unprecedented orientation as a society.

Bananas as a fruit are dieing in evolution. You need to be part of this nature, this world we live in, and not dictate it through ethical guidelines, but take part of diplomacy and the world we live in. Give, and not only take, don't frame responsibilities on others. Those people in THAT house are not your cousins. () And nor is George Bush mine. Our origins, our prehistoric monkeys left the trees only four million years ago and stood up on two legs. Not many seem interested in one of our oldest heritage: saving bananas, but Rechy and I will continue investigating.

Re: Evolution

About me: Evolution is not a revolution. Windmills may be more a revolution today than evolution. I am not an evolutionarist, though have considered a Windmill Revolution which is part of the Industrial Revolution. Saving the planet, but no, I am not a real humanitarian. I was voted employee of the month at a human rights organization where I worked as a waiter with Rechy. We both fell out of a third floor window once, I landed on my feet, Rechy did not. Aside from Rechy having stopped shaving his mustache, things are wonderful. We are described as simple people and I am still working as a journalist. Sometimes, we visit the steam train where Rechy used to work as a coal stoker, and we always yell Papaya Papaya before pulling the whistle. He assists me with commentaries and says he now works in the White House as a coat hanger at the entrance. He sleeps there, his mustache is blown in and out of his mouth as he snores and awakes with his mustache between his lips momentarily with just awoken eyes when somebody walks by. Having no interest in leaving the visitor's coats there, he falls back to sleep, his head faces upwards and he snores. He was many times offered a drink of White House Martini with too many lime seeds he says, they are not supposed to squeeze the lime seeds from the lime into the drink, and then spent the day sleeping passed out, dreaming of a lake surrounded by all the women in the world, and he is some blond man in this dream, riding on a white horse with Lacrimosa, who he stole from all the men. But then! Sir John Google arrives on a black horse, and they fight to the death, sword to sword. There is an immense world living inside Rechy. I mean, inside Lacrimus.