

Re: Day off from crimes against humanity (Part 11 of Psycho Barbarian)

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.astro/2007-11/msg00011.html>

- From: gb6726 <gb6726@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 01 Nov 2007 11:17:53 -0700
-

On Nov 1, 12:09 pm, gb6726 <gb6...@xxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

On Nov 1, 12:00 pm, gb6726 <gb6...@xxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

Crimes against humanity exists. It is something that destroys humanity, something that does things that degrade the worth of human life to conditions seen in the days of slavery, things that scum people for high power in horrendous conditions reminding us of horrors seen in World War II times where value of life was low.

To commit repression against humanity may be a deliberate culture acting in ways ways not allowed and as that very isolated from the World. Crimes committed against humanity are punished by human rights organizations as that, power that has more presence as power of repression than brain, atrocities result from an escalating intolerance that is often racial in standpoint.

Excruciating humanity, turning to the horrors seen in history, horrors of repression, committing crimes against humanity for a race through a dictatorship is a form of religious authority and authorianism where the cult is seen more important than life itself and society disintegrates into madness of authority and crimes are committed out of passionate conservatism, fascism where racial crimes are allowed as was the case with two men who picked up baseball bats and attacked the first oriental man in an American car factory when they lost jobs to Japanese car makers. The man they killed was a Chinese immigrant and the two men were let free in court as they were seen as one of us, people who don't belong in jail, good citizens who lost jobs unfairly to foreigners. Fascism has horrendous sides in the USA in 2007. Fascism, where racial prejudice in courts is widespread under radical extremism that led to the Iraq war as unchallenged. President Bush himself labeled his politics as passionate conservative. Crimes where racial intolerance creates conditions that turned 80–90 percent of Arabs to think negatively of Americans, thus setting skin against skin for victory, and what comes into play? Human rights. Not because of an incident, but because of world scale totalitarian domination reminding of Hitler, and the world's most popular country has not been doing well, even the dollar was falling under Bush, now below the Canadian dollar and recession can break out as countries like China and Saudi Arabia are considering investing in the Euro instead. A country destroyed reputationally, economically disbalanced by a racist extremist in power who declared war on grounds of revenge (fascism) on 9/12/2002, the day after he met with the families of the WTC victims and promised them revenge for Osama's crimes. The next day president Bush used the first anniversary of 9/11 to take out his father's greatest enemy, Saddam for Osama's crimes. Basically to frame him and take him out, but not seeing racism around the world as any problem, not evaluating what such a war means in international diplomacies, in terms of peace, in terms of culture, in terms of reality where life at large on the planet lived without racism. Traveling did not come in the past with racial prejudice, and the World learned from World Wars not to repeat mistakes of the past. World War I started out as a revenge on terrorists. Of course when the wrong groups, cultures and people are attacked for crimes they didn't do, situations of world wars 'develop' and fascism outbreaks in mass sentiments of prejudice and racism and black governments.

Re: Day off from crimes against humanity (Part 11 of Psycho Barbarian)

In German accent: Authority aims committing generally political crimes of totalitarian repression and/or taking advantage through discriminations of police that place a person or group in a horrendous human-rights conditions to face power (without authority).

Such darkness is control arises as must (back to English) with the police cameras and religious totalitarian supremacy of power repressed militantly such as Ceausescu's regime where government, where great power takes all precedence...

Re: Day off from crimes against humanity (Part 11 of Psycho Barbarian)

...for a system and makes it a mandate in all corners of life as a place that is more, a place that is better, a place that is made by the government as that, but first, generations must pay before the plans realize and building projects such as that by Stalin form that sacrifice, though unnecessarily, it is sought with interest as matters of expansion and power. 40 million people died under Stalin in peace time.

Powers of repression ran all government and Ceausescu as the USA saw no need for villages, culture, and such things in the USA are narrowed to deserted reservations. Fascism, control is a grotesque pet project of its militant leader who is only interested in security, to erect a model state as an empire and act pervasively with his own pet projects that are of great magnitude. Pet projects where he himself is on top of everything and he himself crosses out pictures of wanted and killed terrorists. Ceausescu himself ran 30 government departments and couldn't care of humanitarian interests, culture, only of his own militarily endorsed big projects for which he received giant standing ovations regardless of his saying. Impeach Hitler? Hitler's second rank officers wouldn't dare to disagree with him. As Stalin who happily shoots his first rank government taverishes at his home, he sat and made the top government officials dance with no music. Fear was at command, as under Hitler, as under Stalin, as under Bush?

Impeach Bush, yeah right, Americans would say, he is just not the type for that, he is a military giant whom the world needs to love, regardless of hating him for racism. 80–90 percent of Arabs now think negatively of Americans as a result of the Iraq war. Yes, Bush is feared, people don't know if they would be arrested for speaking against a pet project that is more than just what he says, more like less. To ignore racism is corruption. Safety that the USA is about religiously should not compromise racism since it is the same corruption as anywhere, and just because it is the USA it does not make it not a crime. Safety cannot compromise racism else it is corruption, a political corruption as anywhere else. Yes, there is a police inclination in the USA, a police that tarnishes and scientologically pursues its police hardcore on masses' belief systems as mandatory racism in power.

There is a lot being said. In 2003, a criticism in a letter to the US government sent the CIA all over me.

Re: Day off from crimes against humanity (Part 11 of Psycho Barbarian)

A CIA officer attacked me with vicious killer talk and hate, he started framing me like my stalker, but luckily he didn't get far.

Framing is his life.

CIA stalk officer. A cannibal is munching here in your dictatorial frame world. A cannibal who is not a human rights activist, a cannibal who eats people and wants world war. I was written up for the illegal use of the words world war III.

To tell you the truth, I wasn't a very big boy when the CIA came to investigate me and I wasn't a very big boy when a stalker online began hate criminalizing my name and dug up all the past activities of my life, all my past emails, and was following me.

Basically even if I would be a star, such a stalker would be a criminal.

In 2003 a lot has changed in the USA. It was the big government and the people, and not much changed in the USA since the 1970's, only that all big government built in to the phone companies now, a form of wiretapping madness that Nixon resigned for. A wiretapping madness of a mid-20th century regime superpower broken into 1st class citizens, a secret service organization and people in the government eliting conditions in the government for the 1st class citizens, meaning to run for Senate, one needs on average 15 million in the bank account. If politicians represent the people, the people must be very rich in both parties, and each year elections receive more and more money, more than the cost of any Hollywood movie. Politics has become money and fame business and as that more and more Hollywood than reality.

My heart was racing when the CIA officer spoke with a familiar language of a regime, ready to frame me for political crimes as I wrote a letter to the city I live in and expressed confusion about the idea that people can own cities and spoke of human problems and barbarism I guess in terms of cultural undertakings that are not allowed. Private owners to cities where people live means the government is in private hands. Federalistic madness and not Democracy, where the word Democracy means power belongs to the people, and as that a private owner to an entire city of more than 70 thousand residents violates the fundamentals of Democracy and builds a hardline tie as that to the CIA. Yes, it was the city owner who sent the CIA on me, and I was told he has direct lines to the CIA. In this part of the World Google lives and cares little of culture, humanity, democracy, but of a dark federalistically conspired world of crime and undertaking fascism.

Re: Day off from crimes against humanity (Part 11 of Psycho Barbarian)

Re: Day off from crimes against humanity (Part 11 of Psycho Barbarian)

Undertaking fascism, a mindset also seen in Australia where all aboriginal lands were undertaken by the Australian government. In a place where government is federalism and time is money, sovereignty of entire races to their culture and life are not considered for the crimes of a few. Black and white world one was used to as the United States where business takes first place and all else federally and highly corruptly manipulated for a one system mind with a scientologist pervasiveness to serve the interests of this hive and frames arise, frames that the inner circle understands that such things must happen.

For three weeks after the launch of the US military operation to remove Saddam from power, newspapers in the USA did not write about the first anti-Iraq war protests. Newspaper owners claimed that the public is not interested in the Iraq war at all. For years, every day the number one headline, even in the USA now is the Iraq war. The war started out as a quick coup that was according to Bush was supposed to last a few weeks and over with as Saddam is removed. Bush did not see passed his little dictatorial vision and 6 weeks later stood on Air Force One, and a choir sang behind him as he celebrated the end of the Iraq war as Saddam's government fell. Here is where the federalist's mind stops in all his intelligence and life is seen as that, him good guy, Saddam bad and he won, and that's about it in a Texas man's mind. Simple rules run life and not thinking oriented rules, but one that serves government from a mindset that originated from somewhere in 1802 and people in a Saloon with weird faces when one enters during the days of slavery where the value of a human being was not much and people were killed very easily and slaves were brought from Africa by the millions. A deprived value of life and life lived for the money. And the only thing that counts is God Save the Queen and the constitution, a form of barbarism that stems to the British culture and gib government powder, old Guns and federalist barbarism at its heart aiming to rule the world and invade all that can be invaded for eliminating lifestyle of the less developed and colonizing their land to carry the British flag and locals made to work for the white people who drink tea and walk royally stepping and commanding among the native people. The formula is simple. Not for the tea. 1. Arrive with a military. 2. Take over. 3. Impose a British rule. 4. Yell God Save the Queen while at war and establishing a totalitarian government that thinks little of tribal and village life. 5. The military is present until life slowly transforms to serving high power and give way to rich white people settling.

Re: Day off from crimes against humanity (Part 11 of Psycho Barbarian)

Gandhi drove out imperialism from India. He was killed in the end, shot. But he won. He fought a great imperialism without weapons. He thought: We can't win with using weapons, then how can we win? Such an argument can be very powerful against the United States who is growing to become ever more aggressive with Republicans in power and control a military whose power is now a hundred times all the military power in the rest of the world. Gandhi believed that people in India should stand up, even if it means their death. To oppose without weapons and never give in to being imperialized, forced to the supremacy imposed by the British. In the USA there was little human spirit against Bush's Iraq war. 15 million people protested worldwide at the start of the Iraq war (just in the days before Bush's military operation began), no other event in history generated this much worldwide protests, while in the newspapers in the USA protests in US cities were not even mentioned for three weeks. The public is not interested. A coup. Like the one in Moscow that aimed to impose a hardline communism by ridding Gorbachev and claiming he fell ill as the communists took totalitarian control in the government after Gorbachev's perestroika went very successful. The coup was beaten out of power and Gorbachev was found safe kept in arrest by the Communist elite in some house somewhere.

The coup arose in the USA with the Iraq war to establish a hardcore Capitalist militia in power that controls all minds idealistically and speaks of no matters that are not of the public's concern. Nobody is interested in hearing about the Iraq war in the newspapers. As under communism, news that might have triggered opposition to the system was withheld from public knowledge, a corruption was happening at unprecedented scales of repression by those in power living the bluebook of the military regime. Obfuscation of all things called freedom, as we know it for a hard-line government engaging in what Gorbachev immediately called 'political suicide', a regime destined to fall, while decades too soon in timing. Nobody was prepared, I immediately saw Ceausescu and his pet project when Bush declared war against Saddam. Citizen policing and other elements of Ceausescu's regime are found in the USA where there are no villages and an atmosphere that reminds of what Ceausescu wanted to make of Romania. A place where government is one with the people and a man takes full tribal leadership is barbaric in it's world dictatorship form of power and it is unable to escape it's mundane.

Re: Day off from crimes against humanity (Part 11 of Psycho Barbarian)

Power became retained, for government purposes and expressed in Austin Texas where the blackgovernment lines up in all places where there might be intellectual opposition. In all places outdoors where many go out on weekends, riot police are wearing black uniforms, symbolic of a milishia. Tarnish as in days of slavery. There were no exceptions, and blindness ruled while value of life was low, as reflected in Texas where new law in 2007 allows the general population to shoot anyone on sight in self defence. Party with a dictatorship in Austin. Watched by riot police, who cannot speak with the people and await special government orders while they tarnish. Tarnish tavarish PPPC. Tarnish as the government narrows to a dictatorship, and people who go out on weekends after a hard week's work, something all people deserve without being watched by the government, slimes of psychopaths, their lives aimed for molestation, discrimination, as was in the 1930's when the KKK reached highest political success and ran most political and Sheriff's offices in many states, primarily in Southern States. In Colorado, only one town, Colorado Springs resisted the KKK. Italians were saught, as they drank wine, made their own wine, and therefore showed disrespect. Big brother is still around in 2007.

--

As for my stalker online... According to the FBI, no murders were committed to history relating to the Internet. Only one murder case exists in Russia where a man was annoyed by popup ads from an English language school that he couldn't remove and kept coming back. The language school happened to be not far from where he lived, he picked up a shovel, went to the language school and beat the man who made the popups to death.

As far as statistics, it is safer to be online, traced and followed with hate crimes by a psychopath than to be anywhere in the world. The sentiment does remind by seeing a man digging up all past email addresses and followed with hate pages of being followed by a killer. I once had a bullyish face when I was reminded that there are a million people online and one cannot know who he meets. I didn't believe I could get into trouble. Let alone a killer in my life following me with hate, his pages created problems in my whole family where my father is scared he cannot get a job as he has the same name. When someone at work came to him if it was him online, he was too embarrassed to admit it was his son, or his son's stalker using his son's name in deliberance of ashaming, destroying a life with hate crimes. Ashamed, that his son did not disappear and let those things rub off, but everything becomes a problem as Google does not let anything rub off as they archive all things permanently in generally non-removable forms. His son tried and contacted web service providers and removed some of the hate pages, but they kept coming for three years now and the relentlessness of a possessive psychopath cannot be destroyed. The police did not believe me and claimed it was my fault that I don't stay offline. Why should I stay offline? Why should I be a possession of fear in life, and for life for that matter, a man living in fear by being followed. The psycho is a Google lover and my Google talk turned him into a man out of a Steven King horror story. Words of extreme repression, sadism, torture, taking possession of a life, being followed like by the Gestapo in 1941. I would be in trouble in 1941 for speaking against Google and now facing Booglebush, the threat psycho who is loved by police and claims psychotic deliberance to the whole world through following his greatest admiration, Google to the fastest growing success of any American company in history. Google is expected to surpass the size of Microsoft in 2008. It took Microsoft over three decades to grow to this size, to Google less than a decade. Microsoft called Google insane and this insanity has a face, one who does what Google does to people. Take full control of the Internet and all things there and force it to submission and fear for a policy that claims full leadership and there can be no otherwise, but hell of fear for those who do evil against Google and commit thought crime. Google is watching.

Add: Everything takes up the form of indestructibility and invincibility in the minds of psychopaths who become very similar to fascists in all regards. Watching, possessing, controlling, following, serving the Feurer and the empire through barbarism at it's educationally dirtiest forms of crime of undertaking the masses and life in all forms as one serving power and one that must serve power. Google psychopaths take up on a rich addicting ingredient of psychotic pervasiveness.

Re: Day off from crimes against humanity (Part 11 of Psycho Barbarian)

Add: Let's go back to sleep. Maybe I can dream once again.