

Re: Paper: The nature of plant species

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.bio.evolution/2006-03/msg00476.html>

- From: nospam@xxxxxxxxxx (Paul Ciszek)
 - Date: Fri, 31 Mar 2006 15:15:17 -0500 (EST)
-

In article <e0al7o$j8$1@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>, Robert Karl Stonjek <rstonjek@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

Contrary to conventional wisdom, plant species are more likely than animal species to represent reproductively independent lineages.

I'm having trouble with this; Horizontal Gene Transfer does take place in plants. Does it ever in animals?

—

Please reply to: | "Any sufficiently advanced incompetence is pciszek at panix dot com | indistinguishable from malice."
Autoreply is disabled |

.