First off, I would like to state that I am a biochemist not a biologist and evolutionary biology is not my main field of activity. Anyway, this brings me to my first question. I was recently on answers.yahoo and someone asked about the origin of metamorphosis. I realized that in this area I hadn't a clue as to the evolutionary origin of metamorphosis in insects and other invertebrates. If anyone would be willing to espouse knowledge on the subject please by all means enlighten me.
