I'm curious if anyone else has made this move and what your thoughts were? The environment is great, the potential boss is great, the lab is great, it's just the day-to-day thing which makes me question this position. There would be the possibility of moving within the company either to a group leader position (within 2-3 years - something I want) or moving to another site after 1 year.

My background is in surface science with a heavy emphasis on polymers. I am currently workin in product development.

Any thoughts?
