

Re: the silliness of such things as mental effects

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.cognitive/2004-08/0416.html>

From: Allan C Cybulskie (allan.c.cybulskie_at_yahoo.ca)

Date: 08/12/04

Date: Wed, 11 Aug 2004 20:01:27 -0400

"patty" <pattyNO@SPAMicyberspace.net> wrote in message news:33oRc.110651$eM2.45663@attbi_s51...

> Lester Zick wrote:

> I would, however, like to comment on the silliness of such things as > mental effects. There are none! Think about it. If you act one way, > you can be thinking and feeling another way, and if you don't change > your behavior in the slightest, no one can ever know, and your mental > activity will have absolutely no effect. Lester, you above all people, > should appreciate that.

Um, I fail to see why this is important. You are correct, and in fact I may even be trying to ensure that no one else knows. But it still has an effect, in at least my thinking and even in the actions I take. If it NEVER impacted any of my actions, THEN it might have been useless, but I'm not certain that's ever the case, and even if it was it may still have an impact on the internal behaviour itself.