

Free Course Notes – Introductory Economics

Source: <http://sci.tech–archive.net/Archive/sci.econ/2004–06/1262.html>

---

kevinbucknall_at_hotmail.com

Date: 06/22/04

Date: 22 Jun 2004 05:21:53 -0700

I have recently retired from tutoring for GCE economics (a UK course & exam for college entrance) and decided to put the notes that I used up on the web and make them freely available for students to use. It would help your students (I trust!) if they knew. This is to inform everyone that these notes exist and where to download them.

The URL is hardly memorable, but it can be copied and pasted into web browsers easily enough:

<http://www.zen40585.zen.co.uk/>

All the files are downloadable and in pdf format. There is a link on my site to Adobe Acrobat so that anyone without the free Acrobat Reader can download that first and use it to read the economics files.

This is an ongoing project and new files will be added as I find the time. Currently this is daily but that may not last.

My original site contains a free book of advice on studying at university and adjusting to life there, plus some tips on how to do better in exams, how to start research, and some microeconomic notes that I used to lecture from.

This URL is:

<http://www.bucknall.homestead.com/>

Please feel free to make us of this information if you so choose.

Best wishes to all.

Kevin

P.S. 1. All files have been checked by Norton Antivirus to ensure that they are clean.

2. I shall be posting this notice on different groups now and then, so my apologies if you stumble across it elsewhere.

3. There is of course a bias towards the UK in the statistics and intstitutions.