Roy L, the good of the many – advancement of the human species – that may be best served from a logans run type society – but peoples individual instinct for survival will always overpower that benevolence to suffer for the greater good.

How do you honestly expect me and you and any other american to walk down to south africa and sign over our possessions when we hit 30 or 40 or 50?

Really?

Nash showed a theory that doing for the good of yourself and the group everybody wins – but your theory ultimately puts the good of the group above the individual and as long as society is made up of self serving individuals that is just not going to happen. To get what you want, we have to become a borg collective – an we are a LONG WAY from that kind of loss of individual want and need – what you want may be good in 1000 years with the cyborgs – but today it is a waste of your breath. It will never happen in the immediate future – do you honestly think it can?
