

Re: Winston Churchill: Land Price as a Cause of Poverty

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.econ/2005-02/1476.html>

From: König Prüß, GfbAEV (sauerkraut_at_weinerschnitzle.com)

Date: 02/17/05

Date: Thu, 17 Feb 2005 13:58:29 GMT

"Quirk" wrote:

>LAND PRICE AS A CAUSE OF POVERTY

>

>Winston Churchill's Speech in the House of Commons, 4 May 1909, >in response to Mr AJ Balfour, Leader of the Opposition

>

>The immemorial custom of nearly every modern State, the mature >conclusions of many of the greatest thinkers, have placed the tenure, >transfer, and obligations of land in a wholly different category from >other classes of property. The mere obvious physical distinction >between land, which is a vital necessity of every human being and which >at the same time is strictly limited in extent, and other property is >in itself sufficient to justify a clear differentiation in its >treatment, and in the view taken by the State of the conditions which >should govern the tenure of land from that which should regulate >traffic in other forms of property.

Oh, yeah! Land tenure. Land tenure is a big deal in Guatemala, where I think a dozen families own 80% of the land.

There are land tenure projects and a land tenure institute.

So, what are the big differences between Venture Communism and Economic Democracy?

<http://www.ied.info/>

<http://www.ied.info/books/ed/>