

Re: Why must the Capital Acc. = the Current Acc.?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.econ/2005-02/3069.html>

From: Yurk Yurk (yurkyurkyurk_at_yahoo.com.au)

Date: 02/25/05

Date: Fri, 25 Feb 2005 10:58:27 +1000

- > Someone in Japan has now got a million Australian dollars. This counts as
- > a capital asset. If they don't use it to buy Australian goods, the only
- > other thing to do with it is to exchange it for other Australian assets.

Okay. But what if they prefer to save it? Can't they keep stores of $A in their Japanese bank?