It is the CEO that took the wealth created by the engineers and delivered it to them as dividends and capital gain.

The engineers and workers create the product, not the market or the infrastructure or the business.

Take a team of 10 engineers and a team of 10 businessmen.
Put each of them on an isolated island and come 10 years later to see which have more infrastructure in place.

The "infrastructure" it is an accumulation of the "products" created by engineers. The businessmen were just hypocritical enough to cheat or force the creator of products to give it to them.

This is a good recipe for the corporation going out of business

Correct.

and no new ones starting up

False. The people with skills will do it.
To make a product you need skilled workforce and capital.
If you let the skilled workers to have enough capital they will start their own business, no need for the others.
