

Yep, a Georgist concoction!

---

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.econ/2006-09/msg00278.html>

---

- From: w\_b\_ryan@xxxxxxxxxx
  - Date: 25 Sep 2006 22:16:51 -0700
-

The man, Bill Buckley, is a prolific author of books and articles. Cite a single reference to one of his books or articles where he supports the Georgist position.

royls@xxxxxxxxxx wrote:

On 25 Sep 2006 13:19:02 -0700, Lyin' Ryan wrote:

Because I'm quite sure he didn't say it.

<yawn> Yes, vicious, evil, lying filth. Just like you were absolutely positive several Nobel laureates in economics did not sign an open letter to Gorbachev advocating land value taxation, and were proved a liar. Just like you were 100% definitely certain that economics laureates Milton Friedman and Paul Samuelson had not made additional statements supportive of LVT, and were given the references, and promised to look them up, but have thus far declined to report the results here.

They are the words of a stupid ignoramus, and whatever else may be said about Bill Buckley, he ain't that.

He sure ain't. But you have proved that you are, as well as a liar.

Besides, the burden of proof is on those—meaning the Georgists—who claim he said it.

Yep, a Georgist concoction!

As in the previous cases where you outrageously attempted to claim that eminent economists were lying about what other eminent economists had said, the references are readily available. Google Buckley's name along with various terms for LVT, and start reading, stupid ignoramus.

-- Roy L