

Re: Theory of beliefs, belief fields

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.econ/2006-12/msg00108.html>

- From: "FabrizioJBonsignore" <djbonsignore@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Tue, 05 Dec 2006 17:05:10 -0500
-

They dont get it yet: a well integrated man doesnt like to be manipulated by anybody, doesnt want nor need and administered nor managed life, expects to be believe by word and to be treated with dignity.

Well, dont care much now. The brother of Valero, Mato, did steal from me a toy when we were in fourth grade, an action man, so maybe... it was destroyed afterwards and we were not friends til after high school when we got interested in computers. Didnt link the Valero s too much with any extremist pathology, but maybe they themselves were surrounded by fanatics and we were all unaware. If he or anyone in his family was a walkie talkie, then I would appear as the thief to whoever was hearing.

Looks like the US bureaucracy is now owing me much more than a restitution, though maybe finding who modified taht Simpson s episode would be a fair beginning. Fact is I dont know if they are alive. And it is OBVIOUS that I am writing all this because the OTHER SIDE doesnt understand the need to communicate.

No, I dont think they will go historic with a few stolen works. Too muc creative pressure, but then if they so much want... (maybe another sperstition behind?... maybe the Bardo Thodol or the Book of Death of the Egyptians? Somewhere... maybe the Mexican Indians and their illusion of the reverie, dreams poked and connected like chat servers when conscience is low and maybe transparent... so the illusion that if many people think of you, after death, you would turn into a god? Kind of the novel Small Gods, being pushed into the desert because no one els