

Re: watering system, second attempt.

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.basics/2004-08/0429.html>

From: andy (news4_at_earthsong.free-online.co.uk)

Date: 08/07/04

Date: Sat, 07 Aug 2004 13:57:22 +0100

On Sat, 07 Aug 2004 04:45:33 +0000, Rich Grise wrote:

> andy wrote:

>

>> On Thu, 05 Aug 2004 08:37:00 +0100, Terry Pinnell wrote:

>>

>>> andy <news4@earthsong.free-online.co.uk> wrote:

>>>

>>>

>>>> that's just the way the program i have writes out an image.

>>>> I've run it through a paint program to make it b/w and smaller:

>>>>

>>>>

>>>> <http://www.niftybits.ukfsn.org/electronics/daily-water-with-chip.png>

>>>

>>> Can't see any change! Still that awful colour scheme, and still too >>> large to view comfortably.

>>

>> sorry, i re-did it and then forgot to change the link. it should be:

>>

>> <http://www.niftybits.ukfsn.org/electronics/daily-water-with-chip-bw.png>

>> <http://www.niftybits.ukfsn.org/electronics/daily-water-with-chip-bw.png>

>>

> All this is to operate your daily tank-dumper?

>

> I'd use a $3.95 coffee timer. ;-)

>

> Cheers!

> Rich

what's one of them? how? can you run it off a small solar panel?

--

<http://www.niftybits.ukfsn.org/>

remove 'n-u-l-l' to email me. html mail or attachments will go in the spam bin unless notified with [html] or [attachment] in the subject line.