

Re: dvd screen from laptop screen

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.basics/2004-08/1196.html>

---

From: Rune Christensen (rune.christensen\_at\_adslhome.dk)

Date: 08/21/04

Date: Sat, 21 Aug 2004 21:08:30 +0200

"andy" <news4@earthsong.free-online.co.uk> skrev i en meddelelse news:pan.2004.08.21.19.51.18.272681@earthsong.free-online.co.uk...

> On Sat, 21 Aug 2004 18:23:26 +0000, Michael Black wrote:

>

>>

>> "viper" (viper@netcom.no) writes:

>>> Hi.

>>> Just wondering, is it possible to make incar dvd screen from a used pentium

>>> svga laptopscreen.

>>>

>>> Best regards

>>> Viper

>>>

>>>

>>

>> Well, you put a DVD drive in the laptop, and run software for viewing the

>> DVDs, and you've got your DVD player.

>>

>> Or, get a card thatt has video in, and feed your external DVD player into >> that. (I don't know if there are limitations in doing this).

>>

>> The LCD display in a laptop is meant for integrated use in the laptop.

>> It's not like a VGA monitor that accepts VGA signals. It is interfaced >> at a different level. Without the laptop, you'd be missing needed >> electronics.

>>

>> Every time a question like this comes up, the answer is pretty pessimistic.

>> There's not enough information available about the laptop displays, and >> even if one had such information it would require work.

>>

>> Michael

>

> as far as I can tell,

sci.electronics.basics: Re: dvd screen from laptop screen

>

> http://www.hy-line.de/computer/frames/frame\_display\_kits.html

>

> make separate lcd controller modules that might do