

Digital cameras and the cold

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.basics/2004-11/1566.html>

---

From: Eric R Snow (etpm\_at\_whidbey.com)

Date: 11/29/04

Date: Mon, 29 Nov 2004 13:40:52 -0800

The other day I brought my pentax optio 330 into the house from outside in the car. It was about 40 degerees F. Taking a couple indoor pictures with the cold camera without the flash resulted in orange tinted photos, Using the flash the pictures looked right. Is there something about ccd imaging devices that would make them react this way to cold? Just curious.

Thanks,

Eric R Snow