

Re: Good coating for condensation protection?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.basics/2004-12/1687.html>

---

gototcm_at_aol.com

Date: 12/30/04

Date: 29 Dec 2004 17:50:26 -0800

I would not rely on conformal coating on the circuit board. It is a good vibration damper and protects against, at best, light levels of dew formation. If you expect to have water condensation than I would recommend epoxy. But it will depend on if your sensor operates mostly in a narrow range of temperatures or across a broader range such as below freezing to 90 deg. F.