

Re: Watt meter

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.basics/2006-01/msg00587.html>

- From: NoSpam@xxxxxxxxxxxx (Bob Masta)
 - Date: Fri, 13 Jan 2006 13:32:31 GMT
-

On Thu, 12 Jan 2006 13:40:33 -0500, A Man <uce@xxxxxxx> wrote:

<snip>

>I read an article that if you sum all the power used by built-in clocks in >your house, like on the stove, microwave, TV, VCR, etc that you have >significant power uses. But what does "significant" mean? Does that mean if I >turned them all off I'd save $1 per month? Or save $2? In Feb 2005 my >electricity alone cost me $250, so $2 is not going to break me. And I have a >tiny house (850 sq ft).
>

Steve Ciarcia, the publisher of Circuit Cellar magazine, related his experience with this last year. He figured we was burning up around $100 per month this way. However, after reading his description of all the "gotta have it" gadgets he had running, I'd say he has a serious reality disconnect! ;-)

Best regards,

Bob Masta
dqatechATdaqartaDOTcom

D A Q A R T A
Data AcQuisition And Real-Time Analysis
www.daqarta.com
Home of DaqGen, the FREEWARE signal generator
.

- Follow-Ups:
 - ◆ Re: Watt meter
◇ From: galt_57
- References:
 - ◆ Watt meter
◇ From: galt_57

Re: Watt meter

◆ Re: Watt meter

◇ From: A Man

- Prev by Date: Re: Electric safety rule ?
- Next by Date: Re: Making three-way audio switch
- Previous by thread: Re: Watt meter
- Next by thread: Re: Watt meter
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread