Yes it shows when you are logged in. Most email harvest software does not login though.

I'm not talking about logging into Google Groups, I'm talking about the tens of thousands of real usenet news servers. Earthlink, for example, is displaying your full email address as I type this reply. Tell me, why would ANYONE try to harvest Email addresses through a slow and clumsy HTML portal when the raw data is out there? They download the headers for a newsgroup, run it through the spambot and move on to the next newsgroup. The harvesters sell the addresses to spammers, and even SPAM the groups they have harvested in an attempt to sell more copies.
