

Re: War on humanity

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2004-06/1750.html>

From: R. Steve Walz (rsteve@armory.com)

Date: 06/12/04

Date: Sat, 12 Jun 2004 03:51:42 GMT

Captain wrote:

>

> "R. Steve Walz" <rsteve@armory.com> wrote:

>

> The leaders of the soviet Union were convinced that their way of government > was best for "the masses",

The rich HERE are JUST SOOO SURE that what makes them rich will magically be the "best thing" for the rest of us, so self-deception abounds among the greedy. That's nothing surprising, since greed arises as a deep neurosis of a defective self-esteem.

> Brunowski said: "Beware of the men who know > they are right."

Yes, yes. Like Brunowski.

> and that is still very good advice. The Nazis knew they > were right. So did Pol Pot and his Kmer Rouge. So do Al Khaida.

This is a defective semantic criticism:
People who are wrong all think they are right,
but then so do people who actually are right.
And most people deny they think they are right merely to be politic.

> Once you > know you are right, you can do anything you want to do, no matter how > destructive and reprehensible, because what you are doing is right.

Or not destructive, if you think THAT'S right.
And then you wouldn't criticize it.

You see, what this points up is that all these criticisms are semantically defective because they are instances of selective attention.

> I'm afraid Mr Waltz knows he is right, so everone else must agree or be,

Re: War on humanity

- > hmm, I wonder what word he'll come up with – "Purged?", "Banned?",
- > "Terminated with extreme prejudice?".

First, learn to spell my name,
Then quite confabulating things you're only AFRAID I'll say,
And read me just for comprehension.

Next, stop bothering to criticize me personally,
Because your ad hominem blather really won't do you any good,
since this stuff isn't anything personal.

Instead deal with my concepts alone.
I DARE you!!

- > Speaking as one of those greedy, capitalist bullies, I'd just like him to
- > know that he's on my "Do not hire" list.
- >
- > Cap

You're avoiding my concepts with ad hominem blathering.

And as for laughable employment, I don't need you,
You have no effect.
Steve