

Re: what's a callback?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2004-12/4693.html>

From: Frank Bemelman (f.bemelmanq_at_xs4all.invalid.nl)

Date: 12/22/04

Date: Wed, 22 Dec 2004 22:04:10 +0100

"Mike Monett" <no@spam.com> schreef in bericht news:41C9D4F8.2617@spam.com...

> Frank Bemelman wrote:

>

> [...]

>

>> Nobody forces you to use the latest windows software. If DOS3.22 >> works for you, why upgrade?

>

> [...]

>

> This method is the opposite of the Windows procedure, where you load a program

> first, then search for the desired file. It is several orders of magnitude > faster than Windows, and completely avoids the confusion and errors when you > cannot locate the desired file or load the wrong one.

Seems that you've got yourself organized well. But under windows I too select files and hit enter. Or click it with the right mouse key, and choose from print, mail-to, compile/make, copy, zip, or whatever is a valid option for that particular type of file under my mouse pointer. Win3.1 never attracted me.

Much too much trouble with that. But a lot has improved since then.

--

Thanks, Frank.

(remove 'q' and 'invalid' when replying by email)