

Re: Sad Days for America and the World– Four More Years of Hell

Source: <http://sci.tech–archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2005–01/6506.html>

From: Frank Bemelman (f.bemelmanq_at_xs4all.invalid.nl)

Date: 01/23/05

Date: Sun, 23 Jan 2005 17:01:24 +0100

"Fred Bloggs" <nospam@nospam.com> schreef in bericht news:41F3BB10.8040602@nospam.com...

>

>

> Brian wrote:

>> "Fred Bloggs" <nospam@nospam.com> wrote in message

>> news:41F3366C.5020109@nospam.com...

>>

>>>

>>>Brian wrote:

>>>

>>>>I've read "the bull" and of course, not being sick like you, I read

both >>>>sides and determined what is probable. Hence I am not single minded and >>>>sick like you. However, please tell me how many people a monster must >>>>murder, must gas, must torture and kill before you find it offensive.

>>>

>>>Why don't you ask Bush , Rumsfeld, or Gonzalez that question...

>>>

>>>

>>

>> Because I asked you. And, even if you blame us for every death from >> liberating Iraq,

>

> There has been no liberation of Iraq– people are afraid to leave their > homes in many parts of the country, it is in a state of total chaos–

> this is not liberation.

>

>> it is still but a tiny fraction of what Saddam killed.

>

> Isn't that just like a moron to fall back on statistics like that. Well > that "tiny fraction" is pushing the better part of a million people.

Perhaps Brian can give us some numbers. That will force him to do some research. It also depends on how you count. The war between Iraq and Iran (1980–1988) has killed quite a few. Not that those numbers have upset the western world at that time.. we couldn't have cared less. Many died as a result of the trade embargo's after the 1st Gulf War, lack of simple medicines etc, who's blame is that? Nobody wanted to believe that Saddam didn't have the impressive amount of WMD's that we thought he had, and instead of finally accepting that fact, the US decided to turn the place into an 100 times greater hell. Just at the time that weapon inspectors were getting more realistic view on the amount of weapons. A bloody shame it is. Okay, the US can repair the material damage, no doubt. But that doesn't make the mistake undone. It could repair some of its international reputation by sending their war criminals to the International Court of Justice, Bush on the top of the list.

BTW, I've killfiled Brian a while ago. I have no interest in his postings. Freedom of speech is great, but I don't need to listen to these idiots.

--

Thanks, Frank.
(remove 'q' and 'invalid' when replying by email)