

Re: [OT:] FTP clients

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2005-03/0322.html>

From: Active8 (reply2group_at_ndbbm.net)

Date: 03/01/05

Date: Tue, 1 Mar 2005 08:22:21 -0500

On Tue, 01 Mar 2005 09:15:59 +0100, Rene Tschaggelar wrote:

> Active8 wrote:

>

>> Just got done chatting with an earthlink droid. I don't recall how many ISPs suggest using WS_FTP for uploading to personal webspace, but the best this moron could do is suggest uploading via this site:

>>

>> <http://www.net2ftp.com/>

>>

>> which decompresses archives. I want to upload a zip, not the individual files contained therein.

>>

>> I used to use WS_FTP Pro 7.6, now it's WS_FTP Pro 9.0 and it at least deleted files. I think it uploaded them too. Using passive xfer (like I selected for the link above and that's the way it always worked at earthlink) and manually selecting binary mode. The new WS_FTP Pro is a radical change in GUI from what I had, but it should still work.

>>

>> If not, who's using what around here? Maybe it's time to change.

>

> Have a look at putty, to be found by google.

>

I have putty, but that would only maybe benefit me for FTP if I can do SFTP with it. Earthlink & SFTP? Nah.

--

Best Regards,
Mike