

Re: Beam me up, Scotty

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2005-07/msg02679.html>

- From: Ben Bradley <ben_nospam_bradley@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 21 Jul 2005 05:54:17 GMT
-

On Wed, 20 Jul 2005 23:03:25 -0400, keith <krw@xxxxxxxx> wrote:

>On Wed, 20 Jul 2005 19:17:03 +0200, martin griffith wrote:

>

>> I always wanted to be a "Scotty"

>>

>>

>> R.I.P James Doohan

>

>"It's dead, Jim."

That's "He's dead, Jim." These three little words were surely first uttered in a very tacky way concerning the death of Gene Roddenberry, IIRC the first person majorly associated with the show to die. I think it was Deforest Kelly, as Lenoard McCoy aka 'Bones' himself who next died, who so many times spoke those very words to his captain.

To make this slightly more S.E.D related, the man who so often said "He's dead, Jim" was named after Lee De Forest, inventor of the triode tube:

<http://klhalliday.com/DeKelley/VirtualCon/Boyhood.htm>

<http://www.mindspring.com/~benbradley>

• References:

- ◆ Beam me up, Scotty
◇ From: martin griffith
- ◆ Re: Beam me up, Scotty
◇ From: keith

- Prev by Date: Re: half bridge mosfet switching
- Next by Date: Re: Electric Fence and Bathroom Habits
- Previous by thread: Re: Beam me up, Scotty
- Next by thread: Re: Beam me up, Scotty
- Index(es):

Re: Beam me up, Scotty

- ◆ Date
- ◆ Thread